

Would you like to study the Bible in depth, but feel you do not have the background or resources to pursue this task alone?

When you read the Bible do you ever ask yourself any of these questions:

Who authored the books of the Bible?

When and where was this book written?

Was the text I just read literal or symbolic?

How does this passage apply to us today?

Why are there four gospels?

Why does my Bible skip some verse numbers?

Why don't I understand this passage?

Why are all these genealogies important?

Bible Searchers Sunday School Class

No matter how long each of us has been a Christian, one thing most of us share is a feeling of inadequacy when it comes to our knowledge of the Bible. We know that our relationship with God comes from the knowledge of His Word and prayer. In order to draw closer to God and live as he commands, we must gain a better understanding of God through the study of Scripture.

Many people undertake this vital task with earnest intentions, but are soon overwhelmed with the complexity of reading and understanding the Bible. Details and background information that would aid in our understanding of the Scriptures are not always obvious in our daily Bible readings. While a Study Bible is an important tool to improve our personal understanding of Scripture, it still leaves many questions unanswered.

Commentaries are the next logical step if you are earnestly seeking a real understanding of the Bible.

There are a vast number of commentaries which often do not agree, some often skip the difficult verses that may interest you, some promote a different theology, and they can be very expensive. So where can you find answers to the questions that are important to you?

Group Bible study is an excellent choice to improve your personal understanding of the Bible. Some of the advantages of group study are:

- ◆ Sharing of information and experiences with others
- ◆ Ability to ask questions
- ◆ Structured study schedule
- ◆ Fellowship with others who are interested in you and your growth
- ◆ Making new friends who share your thirst for a deeper understanding of Scripture
- ◆ Presentation of material from many resources often unavailable to most people

Bible Searchers Sunday School Class

The Bible Searchers Sunday School Class is devoted to a detailed examination of the books of the Bible verse-by-verse. Each lesson is prepared by studying the Scriptures and the examination of up to twenty-five commentaries. This information, as well as that from other references are then sifted through, theories are examined and the meat of that information is condensed and presented in simple, easy to understand terms by the teacher.

Whether you are a new Christian or have been one for many years, your own experiences, opinions and questions can be the stimulus that brings all of us to a new understanding of Scripture through group discussion.

We are a class of mixed adults who believe the study of the Bible can be interesting, intriguing, fun and rewarding. Our class is like an extended family. We share each others joys, triumphs, fears and pains. In Scripture, we search together for answers, comfort and a closer personal relationship with God through his Word.
